

A GOOGLE TAG MANAGER PRACTICE SITE

Kettle & Crumb

BROCHURE

A neighborhood bakery, now practicing its first website.

This is a practice site built for testing Google Tag Manager — every button, form, and section here is a real trigger you can wire up: clicks, form submits, scroll depth, and outbound links.

Order Now | View Menu | Download Menu PDF

Six menu items • Two forms • Three social links • One GTM container

Container ID: GTM-PM9BRNDX

Today's Menu

Each menu selection and add-to-cart action sends item-specific ecommerce data to the dataLayer for GTM and GA4.

Double Roty

Rs. 100

Add to cart button

data-item: double-roty

Sourdough Loaf

Rs. 480

Add to cart button

data-item: sourdough-loaf

Cold Brew

Rs. 320

Add to cart button

data-item: cold-brew

Tandoori Chai

Rs. 150

Add to cart button

data-item: tandoori-chai

Pepsi

Rs. 150

Add to cart button

data-item: pepsi

Crunchy Chicken Pasta

Rs. 900

Add to cart button

data-item: crunchy-chicken-pasta

How menu events work: clicking anywhere on a card (except its Add to cart button) sends GA4's select_item event. Clicking Add to cart sends only add_to_cart, with currency PKR, the item price as value, and one item (item_id, item_name, price, quantity 1). The button briefly shows "Added" for 1.5 seconds.

Tracking & Events

Every button, form, and link is a real trigger you can wire up in GTM.

Our Story, Forms & Find Us

Practice content, two forms, and three outbound links.

Our Story

Kettle & Crumb doesn't exist — it's a stand-in bakery built purely so you have real content to scroll through while testing scroll-depth triggers in GTM.

Keep scrolling past this paragraph and GTM's built-in Scroll Depth trigger should fire once you cross each threshold, assuming you've turned it on in your workspace.

Once you're comfortable with clicks, forms, and scroll, try adding a Timer trigger or a Visibility trigger on this section to round out your practice.
